Global stocks notch biggest weekly gains since November

Investors largely shrug off violence in Washington and US job losses

Global stocks have risen this week as traders looked past the violent clashes in Washington on Wednesday when a pro-Trump mob stormed the Capitol and interrupted the confirmation of Mr Biden as president-elect.

“The only noise in markets . . . was a bullish stampede as [they] continued their strong start to 2021,” said Jim Reid, a strategist at Deutsche Bank.
