not named for Christopher Columbus, but for one of his rivals, a man who had traduced him ☹️ Some one has said that we are moving so fast that when plans are being made to perform some great feat, these plans are broken into by a youth who enters and says, "I have done it." ¶ This is exactly what Cook did for Arctic exploration. He went quietly about his business, but he had been getting ready for twenty-five years for this identical thing.
